“Relationships of all kind are like sand held in your hand. Held loosely, with an open hand, the sand remains where it is. The minute you close your hand and squeeze tightly to hold on, the sand trickles through your fingers.”

– KALEEL JAMISON, AUTHOR OF THE NIBBLE THEORY

He's left you and left you feeling hurt. The world seems like one bad place. Simple pleasures are now torture moments. The shop you visited together now brings back memories of your ex. The activity you'd enjoy weekly together teases you with what good things you had with him. These little reminders make you wish it'd be great to be together again, but you probably think it's over forever.

I'm Jenna James and specialise in helping recently dumped women get their man back. I'm here to tell you no matter how hopeless you think your situation is, I believe you can get him back. I've helped ex convicts, infidel women, and couples nations apart get back together. You were once together so there's something he loved about you whether he admits it to you or not. Couples get back together all the time, but it's been a mystery how they did it – until now.

You too can get your ex boyfriend back using the 101 tips below. This isn't everything there is to win him back – for everything you need to know, I created a full system called Bait Him Back – but these lessons are a good start based on how women get their man back. Because they're only tips, you'll need to ponder on some deeper ones to have the best chance at winning him back. It's important to get to the core of what really matters without playing stupid games so you can be in his arms again.

Some tips below will heavily apply to you while others will not apply. Some will seem silly to you while others create light-bulb moments. Just remember to really think about each tip to see how each one can help your life.

Let's get cracking with the most important tip:

- 1) Identify what went wrong in your relationship and what could have triggered things to spiral downward.
- 2) Don't apologize for yourself or say things like, “I'm sorry I was so horrible to you,” or “I’m sorry I’m not good enough.” You are not the problem – it’s likely something you did is the problem.

3) Keep your cool when you see your ex. A few slow breathes keep you calm. Take five slow ones as soon as you see him.

4) Forgive your ex; don’t let negative feelings fester to the point at which you become resentful.

5) Give your ex the benefit of the doubt rather than assuming he is out to hurt you. You’ll be surprised at how this error for margin makes it easier for you to get back together.

6) Don’t put on a facade so that your ex will show interest in you again.

7) Get honest opinions about both the relationship and your ex from friends you can trust.

8) Don’t overwhelm your ex with gifts and letters. You can’t win him back by giving him incentives to want to date you again.

9) Don’t make ridiculous promises that you can’t keep in order to entice your ex back.

10) Show you’re willing to make changes for things to work out. This does not mean changing yourself and what you stand for, but you must be willing to change behaviors or habits that are damaging to the relationship.

11) Look at this experience from a fresh perspective. See it as a challenge or a span of adversity you need to get through. Don’t look upon the breakup as a blow to your ego or an attack on your character.

12) Hit the gym. Get into some sort of fitness routine and stick to it. You'll feel better from the endorphins and look better from the workout.

13) Develop a strong support system consisting of good friends and family. Just like a recovering alcoholic would have a sponsor, recruit a friend to support you in your moments of weakness. Those tough moments are inevitable.

14) Seek out a therapist. Throw away any preconceptions of what you think about having a therapist, and just do it. Bet you'll be surprised at how nice it is to have someone to vent to.

15) Don't gossip or talk negatively about your ex despite how angry, upset, or hurt you might feel.

16) Engage in activities that require a lot of energy and can serve as a great release of aggression like indoor cycling, boxing, kickboxing, or tennis. Play a game of paintball or take yourself to a driving range. When you see him you'll be better able to keep yourself in check.

17) Get in your car and let it all out. Scream, shout, cry, sing – whatever you have to do to let out your frustration, anger, or disappointment.

18) Get into the present. Do deep breathing exercises when you start to feel out of control. Either meditate on your own, do laps in a swimming pool, or take a yoga class to focus solely on your breath to remain in the present.

19) When you feel your emotions dictate your actions, step back to make an honest list of what things you have the power to control and what things you can't. Recite the Serenity Prayer: "God, grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, Courage to change the things I can, And wisdom to know the difference.”

20) Withhold information. You’re probably used to telling your ex everything. Do your own thing and don’t broadcast it. Get his imagination working; make him wonder what you’re up to.

21) Don’t try to figure out your ex’s schedule or new habits so that you can mold your day in a way that would put you in contact with your ex.

22) Make yourself more valuable by cultivating your knowledge. What are some things you can learn, classes you can take, or books you can read that would give you great material for stimulating conversation?

23) Don’t attempt to change your style to what you think he would prefer.

24) Reevaluate your life and set new goals for yourself. Be bold in your goals. There’s no point in making small goals you know you’ll reach. Stretch yourself a little... or a lot.

25) Get on Amazon right now and order three books that interest you. This will help you learn and do things you wish you could do when single.

26) Take a class in kickboxing, massage, or public speaking. There’s plenty of awesome businesses and colleges that have interesting things for you to do. How will this stuff get him back? Build your life and he will come. Kevin Costner did not make me say that.

27) Practice saying “Yes” more. In a circumstance when you would normally decline an invitation or refuse to go outside of your comfort zone, say yes and do the unusual.

28) Don't invent manipulative tactics to get him back. Your reunion should evolve naturally and not be the result of some conspiracy you contrived to bring him back to you.

29) Change your emotional energy. Stop dwelling on negative self talk, and focus on more positive ideas. The world is the same color as it was when you were dating him; don't paint it gray just because you're not with him anymore. Find the good things in life and embody that energy.

30) Don't put yourself down because you were dumped. Everyone's been there. It's not your inherent flaws that drive anyone and everyone you've ever dated away. There was just some aspect of your relationship that was weak. It's either something you can fix or something you can't; but whatever the reason for the break up, it certainly isn't because you're a horrible human being.

31) Let the word "single" be okay. The word itself sounds ominous and daunting, but it's not a curse. When you dwell on the fact that you're single and it's horrible, you'll end up exuding that energy so that your ex will know how weak you are.

32) Do things that pump up your self-esteem. If you're an excellent rock climber, take your friends and go climbing. Being super good at something gives you a positive rush.

33) Don't taunt your ex by bringing other guys around purely to make him jealous. He'll think you want to hurt him and no longer care for him.

34) Have a sense of humor. Did he leave you because you became like super glue attached to him? Laugh at it. If you can laugh at yourself and embrace the light-hearted side of things, you'll be in a less vulnerable position when you two are in contact with each other. I'm sure there's something funny you can pick out of your break up!

35) Act independent and secure rather than aloof and indifferent.

36) Put yourself in your ex's shoes. See things from his vantage point. What role might you have played in the whole break up? Is there something you're not seeing?

37) Don't enter "woe is me"-ville. It's not attractive for you to take on the role as the unfortunate victim. "How could he have done this to me?" "I've been nothing but good to him." The situation sucks, but you're more than equipped to handle it.

38) Don't pester his friends and family soliciting their help to get him back. Be nice to them and they may want to help you get back together.

39) Show him you can be okay either way. You would love to be back with him, but you're perfectly capable of getting on without him. If he doesn't want you, it's his loss. You have no idea how seductive this is to your man.

40) Get a new haircut, whiten your teeth, buy a new pair of jeans or something else that would make you feel better about your image. Don't go overboard though. No tattoos, plastic surgery, or drastic changes if it's inspired by the break up. Drastic measures make you look desperate for attention.

41) Get objective advice. Your friends and family might have great advice, but they are likely to be biased in your favor. Seek out advice for someone who is detached from the situation to assess whether or not the relationship has potential or not.

42) List the things you want in a relationship and gauge whether or not these things are even possible with your ex.

43) Adhere to your standards. If getting him back is going to take serious compromises on your part you don't feel comfortable with, he is probably not worth getting back together with.

44) Be interesting. When you talk to your ex, don't sound like all you've done is pine for him. Show that you've been busy and that your life has thrived even though he chose not to be a part of it.

45) Decide what you want and establish what you will and won't settle for. Write it down if it helps you stick to it.

46) When you're in the same space, make eye contact. Convey there's still a part of him that makes your heart flutter. Keep this subtle. Anything over-the-top or crude is going to work against you. A little wink or prolonged glance is enough to stir up old emotions if they're there.

47) Smile when you're out – even if you don't feel like it. It shows your ex you're not wallowing in pain. Simply engage those muscles to feel happier. Try it now!

48) Handle any and all contact with your ex maturely. Nothing is worse than taking those (perhaps rare) moments of contact and making them work against you. You want to leave him hoping he will see you again, not letting out a sigh of relief that he dumped you when he had the chance.

49) Be blunt and not overwhelming. When discussing the fact you want to get back together, state exactly what you want but refrain from going overboard and sounding desperate and needy.

50) Don't display your anger. Snapping at him in public or using passive aggression to hurt your ex are not the answers.

51) Touch him in a subtle yet affectionate way. When you see your ex in public and have established a mature relationship, place a hand on his shoulder as you walk away.

52) Keep your distance initially after the break up and gradually allow yourself contact.

53) Maintain your appearance and image without overt changes. If you've been a jeans and t-shirt girl for your entire relationship and suddenly you're traipsing to the supermarket in heels and eye shadow, he'll see right past it.

54) Don't put your life on pause simply waiting to get back together again before you resume your life. You'll regret losing this time whether you get him back or not and chances are, you'll end up resenting him for it.

55) Read books and watch movies that depict characters going through the same thing as you. It helps to have someone to empathize with (even if they are fictional). After all, some real-life dumpee dreamed those characters up.

56) When sufficient time has passed, apologize for anything you've done wrong. Remember, you're not apologizing for yourself but rather for the mistakes you made to drive him away.

57) Be cool with other girls he may date. As hard as it might be, it will show him you're mature, confident in your attractiveness, and not threatened. Then maybe shoot him that ever-so-slightly seductive look that says you're all of these things and still have the hots for him.

58) When it seems like he may be showing interest in you again, pull away. Be hard to pin down. Don't make it easy for him to schedule time with you.

59) Avoid adopting his habits and frequenting his spots to see him. Suddenly, you become a church-goer because you know he went every Sunday or you become a member at his gym despite the other twenty gyms in your neighborhood. These actions scream insecure, desperate, and manipulative.

60) Skip logical attempts to get back together. You cannot convince him to get back with you via logic. You're both left-handed so you both can sit next to each other at Thanksgiving dinner or the only reason you nag him is because he gets water all over the bathroom floor but you discovered it's actually the toilet leaking. These may seem like rational arguments; but logic didn't start your relationship the first time, so it will not bring it back this time.

61) Don't drink and dial. If you're going to indulge in some alcoholic beverages, have your friends keep an eye on your phone. When your judgment is impaired, there's no telling what you'll say.

62) Respect his property. I've heard some horror stories of people defacing an ex's property for some strange reason thinking it'll help get them back. No damn way. You might be inclined to spray paint his truck, but refrain if you ever want him to talk to you again.

63) Revenge can be exerted other ways beside physical damage. Skip it all. Do not hurt him in any physical, mental, or emotional way. Not cool.

64) Hold your head up high. If you lose touch for a while, and he hears from his friends that you're now fired from your job and drinking all the time, he'll be thanking his lucky stars he left you when he did. If the next time he hears about you, it's because you were promoted or started a business or got a master's, he'll be second-guessing himself.

65) If you have kids together, refrain from using them to manipulate him into being jealous.

66) Don't put mutual friends into an uncomfortable position. Keep things neutral. Your friends will thank you, and he just might be impressed.

67) If he mentions getting back together first, don't pounce on the suggestion. Approach it in a rational fashion. He dumped you remember? Don't fall back into his arms with no questions asked.

68) Abstain from sex with him if you're not back in a relationship. You might think, "Heck, it's not like it hasn't happened before." It doesn't matter. You avoid sex because it tells him he has you at a dial of his phone and there's no need for a real relationship.

69) Don't maneuver your way into his world by suddenly befriend his buddies when you didn't give them the same attention before. It's completely see-through and unfair.

70) Be the person he fell in love with. Has time changed you in some negative way? Did you become silently resentful or less of the spontaneous person he first started dating? Did you morph into someone else without recognizing it?

71) Leverage the past when you have contact with him. If you know he has a favorite outfit of yours, wear it. If he loves when you straighten your hair, do it. You're not making him jealous or regretful – just calling his attention back to happier, attractive times.

72) If you're in a group situation with him, casually bring up topics you know the two of you bonded over. If you're both die-hard fans of an obscure band, reference that band in conversation with someone else. This is particularly effective if this was one of the things that drew you together in the first place.

73) Agree with the break up. It's counter-intuitive yet one of the best things you can do to get him back! The more you resist the idea of you two splitting up, the more you drive him away. If you convey how you understand why the relationship suffered, he'll see you get where he's coming from. Since he's not trying to convince you why you should "go away," he'll more willingly iron out the kinks.

74) Similar to the previous tip, respect your ex and his decision rather than bashing and trying to convince him he's made the biggest mistake of his life. Doing this, you're proving him right.

75) Stop over-analyzing everything and blowing little actions out of proportion in your mind. Instead of wondering why he's carrying two pizza boxes to his car, worry about yourself and what little things you can do to make your day a good one.

76) Take a trip either alone or with your friends – whatever you feel like you need. Changing the scenery will help change your perspective and to see all the opportunities out there.

77) Hang out with younger cousins or siblings. Being around the carefree, innocent, and playful attitude of kids helps you feel the same way.

78) Get a dog or cat. It's amazing what a little unconditional love can do... not to mention it will take your mind off of the break up.

79) Go with the flow. If you get thrown into some situation where you're interacting with your ex and someone new he's dating, don't let yourself get aggravated and bitter. Stay confident and roll with it. Don't let him see you flustered.

80) Skip the pity pleas. Don't act as if you deserve to be hurt and are searching for pity. It's unattractive and perpetuates that mentality.

81) Keep love and relationships as beautiful things. Don't write them off as horrible because you're hurt. You're not to be resentful.

82) Eat healthy. Don't binge on junk food or use food as a coping mechanism. Stay fit and eat well. It's a natural way to keep your mood lifted and a great way to attract him back.

83) Wake up early. It's a simple way to feel productive, energetic, and positive.

84) When you make contact with your ex, show genuine interest in what he's been up to. At the same time you can avoid appearing jealous and hypercritical of what he's been doing.

85) If you feel like you need to say something to your ex, be clear. Don't drop hints hoping he'll figure out what you're feeling. Keep good communication lines open. This will only work to your advantage.

86) Decline invitations he may extend explaining that you have other plans or there are things on your agenda. No need to be snide about it. Just be frank and honest. He'll really get the message you're out living your life not sitting around waiting for him to come back. However, you'll need to weigh this up against whether it's a chance to reconcile with him. If you two are getting things solved, it may be good to accept the invite.

87) Feel happy for yourself. Acknowledge the break up as a time for change and growth. Your life can change for the good because of what's happened.

88) Casually reference instances or scenarios he used to find incredibly sexy or that would turn him on without making it seem they're directed at him. Don't be crude. Let a seductiveness pervade through you and your actions.

89) Get some sunlight. It's a great way to get your dose of D3 and will boost your mood without fail.

90) Sing nice and loud in the car. Don't choose songs about heartbreak and pain. Instead sing your heart out to bold and inspiring tunes that typically get you pumped up. This will have the same great affect on your state as smiling.

91) Don't become obsessed with getting him back. If that becomes you're only driving force in life, you're going to be disappointed. It's vital you read this report and even get my complete Bait Him Back course if you feel it's right for you. Just know you can live without him.

92) Stay away from relatives and friends you haven't seen in a while who will want to discuss the topic of your break up to death.

93) Try not to be alone on holidays or anniversaries that brim with old memories. Surround yourself with friends in a neutral atmosphere.

94) Hang around friends of the opposite sex. The guys will give you a more accurate version of what your ex is going through or doing on a day-to-day basis. You're likely to overuse your imagination, which will just make you feel horrible.

95) Stand up straight and keep your body language strong and confident. Once you start slumping and acting timid, you'll start to feel this way. He'll notice too if you happen to run into him.

96) In the first few contacts, have conversations with him so neutral he can't really tell you're devastated at all.

97) In later contacts, converse with him in a subtle nostalgic tone. Convey sexiness with your energy not so much with your actions.

98) When a reasonable amount of time has passed, send him a tasteful birthday card or simple text to show you're thinking about him. Don't be surprised if you get a response!

99) Let it go to voice-mail. If he ends up calling you to possibly admit what a big mistake he's made, it will be a powerful message for him if you're not "right there" to take his call the first time.

100) The first tip is so important it needs another mention: Identify what went wrong in your relationship and what could have triggered things to spiral downward.

101) Be the absolute best person you can be, and don't let yourself worry about what he thinks about you. If you think highly of yourself and show it in everything you do, he'll see it. There's nothing more attractive than a person who is sure of herself and what she stands for.

What Should You Do Now?

You've learned a lot from reading those 101 ways to get your ex boyfriend back so don't stop there. Each point is the tip of the iceberg – there's a whole 90% of the iceberg hidden that makes up the foundation of getting him back and ensuring he's committed to you forever.
